Labor Costs At Long Island Sales Big Obstacle In Building

Architects Say Wage Scales Are Chief Factor in Construction Delay; Materials Drop 25 Per Cent

Opinion seems to be crystallizing in his market that almost the sole re-aining retardant to an active buildmaining retardant to an active building market is the war-time wage rates still prevailing in the New York building trades, according to The Dow Service Daily Building Reports.

With building materials showing a drep of approximately 25 per cent in price since the high point of 1920, representing the statement of 40 per cent covering the basic building materials that enter into the construction of the average building project, building investors are beginning to insist that at least a comparable cut be made in wages before they go ahead with construction work they have in contemplation.

Certain architects specializing in apartments, banks, commercial construction, dwellings, factory erection, schools, theaters and wharves have schools, theaters and wharves have been asked what, in their epinion, is the cause of the continued withholding of so many of the great number of building activities that are projected, but which, for the most part, are still being held in abeyance. Their reply is almost unanimously, "Labor wage scales."
